"The Colleen Bawn" at the Chestnut.
Boucault's drama of The Colleen Bawn, which was performed last evening to a crowded house at the Chestnut Street Theatre, is not only one of the author's very best works, but it is a fine example of what a dramatized novel ought to be. Gerald Griffin's romantic and picturesque story of "The Colleen Bawn" furnished the playwright with an excellent subject, but instead of clumsily attempting to reproduce the novel, he took the story and made it his own, and worked it into his own way. This is the manner in which Colman dramatized Goldwin's novel of "Caliban Williams" in his remarkable effective play of The Iron Chest, and it is the only manner in which a play can be successfully arranged on the basis of a novel, as has been demonstrated again and again by the failure of the dramatists who have taken the graphic scenes described by Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, Charles Reade, and others of equal popularity. Boucault has surely enough dramatic sense to answer for, but the certain is not open to the sneers of some of his critics who object to his Colleen Bawn because the subject was adapted from Gerald Griffin. A novel is always fair game for a dramatist, and the only question with the public is whether he makes good use of his material or not. This Boucault undoubtedly has done in the present instance. The Colleen Bawn has a most interesting plot, and it abounds in highly dramatic situations. The characters are admirably contrasted, and the language of the play is often remarkably delicious, abounding in the richest and most genuine Irishisms hitherto used in the theatre when the author was endeavoring to make a reputation for himself. He undoubtedly took more pains with it than he has done with most of the dramas he has produced since he has allowed himself to become a mere hack playwright. The consequence is that it holds the stage with undiminished favor when a large number of the works from the same pen have already long since been forgotten.

The performance of The Colleen Bawn at the Chestnut last evening was in many respects very excellent, and it was heartily enjoyed by the large audience in attendance. Mr. W. J. Florence in "Myra's" part had a congenial role, which he filled in an eminently satisfactory manner, and Mrs. Florence gave a very spirited and pleasing impersonation of "Anne Chute." Miss Lily Davidson, with a little more animation, would have made an excellent representative of "Rily O'Connor." The other parts were very fairly sustained.

The GERMAN OPERA.—The series of seven performances of German opera to be given at the Academy of Music next week will give the music-loving public of this city an opportunity to hear a number of really first-class works executed by a strong company that contains a number of artists who, although they are new to the city, have won excellent reputations elsewhere. Considering the character of the attractions offered the subscription price of seven dollars for the seven performances is certainly very low, and it ought to ensure crowded houses for the entire week. The operas announced are Fidelio, Tannhauser, Merry Wives of Windsor, Traviata, Don Juan, The Magic Flute, Carlo and Zelmira, and Der Freischutz.

At the CHESTNUT Boucault's romantic drama of The Colleen Bawn will be repeated this evening, with Mr. and Mrs. Davidson in the principal roles. A new play entitled Ishtar is in preparation. At the ARCH Robertson's military drama of On a Hill will be repeated this evening.

On Monday next a new piece, entitled Coquette, or the two Javets, will be produced. At the WALNUT Boucault's new drama of The Beggars will be performed for the last time this evening and to-morrow.

To-morrow a new comedy-drama by Arthur Halliday, entitled Wine, Women and Song, will be brought out with new scenery, painted in London, which will present views of some of the most striking points of the city.

At the NEW AMERICAN Theatre a variety performance will be given this evening, for which a great number of attractive features are announced. FORTHEIMER'S great picture of "The Battle of Gettysburg" is now on exhibition at No. 1003 Chestnut street.

At the CHURCH, Tenth and Callowhill streets, performances will be given this evening, when Mrs. O'Fallon, "the man with the iron jaw," and Madeline Angela, "the female sensation," will appear.

At the ARCH STREET Opera House the new holiday pantomime of Hush-a-bye Baby, or Hey Diddle-Dee, and other attractions are announced for the performance to be given this evening.

SINOR BLIZZ and his son will give a magical entertainment at the Assembly Buildings this evening, when "the spirit of the play," the birds, and other wonders will be exhibited.

At the AMERICAN MUSEUM, Ninth and Arch streets, the large and interesting collection of curiosities will be on exhibition from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. The romantic drama of Monte Christo will be represented this evening in the lecture-room.

At DRYDEN & HENNING'S Opera House an entertainment will be given this evening by Amy Lloyd's Female Minstrel Troupe.

We are requested to state that Mr. Carl Wolf's matinee, announced to be given next Friday at the Foyer of the Academy of Music, will be postponed on account of the illness of Madame Bertha Zittel.
